

Jasna Mesaric, MD, PhD

Jasna Mesarić graduated from the Zagreb University School of Medicine, has been board certified in Transfusion Medicine, and also completed a postgraduate study in Clinical Pediatrics; Hematology; and Leader Management Health Service. She holds an academic appointment at Zagreb University School of Medicine (Associate Professor, Department of Internal Medicine). Her academic and professional interests include all aspects of the clinical transfusion medicine and setting strategies for better clinical use of blood. Through the years she has been active and involved in a wide range of issues and initiatives associated with the development of the national quality healthcare improvement.

Since 2007, president of the Croatian Society for Quality Improvement in Health Care, Croatian Medical Association. The Society activities include efforts for continuing professional and scientific education in the field of assurance and improvement of health care quality and patient safety; proposing to respective authorities appropriate measures for quality improvement; and developing collaboration with other Croatian societies and chambers involved in health care as well as with Croatian Agency for Quality and Accreditation, nongovernmental societies involved in patient right protection; and collaboration with respective societies abroad. The Society is member of the following international organizations: European Society for Quality in Health Care (ESQH) and International Society for Quality in Health Care (ISQ).