Andreas Xyrichis is the Policy Advisor at the European Federation of Nurses Associations (EFN). He is a registered nurse specialised in adult Intensive Care with a BSc (Hons) from the Florence Nightingale School of Nursing and Midwifery, King's College London. Mr. Xyrichis holds a Masters degree in Healthcare Research and a Fellowship from the Medical Research Council (MRC) UK working towards a PhD in Nursing at King's College London. While at King's Mr. Xyrichis lectures on Healthcare Research Methodology at PhD, Masters, and post-qualification level, as well as Basic and Adult Nursing Skills at undergraduate level.

Andreas Xyrichis was appointed as Policy Advisor to the EFN in 2009. His role involves following and advising on the EFN many policy dossiers and European projects. Particular areas of activity include the Health Workforce, Patient Safety, Nurse Education, and eHealth. The EFN works in close collaboration with the European institutions such as the European Parliament and Commission, and with many other members of civil society including European stakeholders of health providers and patients' organisations.
